Now Accepting Students to These Two Programs

Master of Education: Language and Literacy
A variety of delivery methods available to meet student needs. The MED in Language and Literacy is a 33 hours intensive program for students who hold a bachelor’s degree and teacher certification. This program serves teachers focused to becoming the best classroom literacy teachers possible. It will help educators be able to plan, implement, and deliver a quality, comprehensive literacy program. This program leads to K-12 Reading Add-on Licensure. Students who complete this degree do not need to pass the PRAXIS exam in order to receive their add-on license. The program is designed to prepare graduates to function effectively in a variety of roles, including: Literacy or Instructional Coach, K-12 teacher with specialized knowledge in literacy teaching and learning, partnership teacher, internship supervisor, site coordinator for undergraduate field experiences, adjunct professor to teach undergraduate methods courses, professional development leader, mentor or graduate students, District literacy coordinator, tutor, etc.

Students can also choose a language and literacy strand in the Elementary Education degree which helps students prepare for K-12 Reading Add-on Licensure.
